A HEAVILY pregnant woman who carried out a series of burglaries has been jailed for 18 months.

Charlotte Binnersley, 21, of Herne Street, Herne Bay, committed 11 burglaries, three thefts and a fraud in the area last year.

She was arrested on September 6, after climbing through the bathroom window of a house in Strode Park Road where she was challenged by the homeowner.

She claimed she was going into labour and needed help, but curious as to why she had climbed through a window, the man called the police. Binnersley was later arrested.

It transpired she was not going into labour but was responsible for a string of offences that had been plaguing the area.

One of her burglaries involved the theft of jewellery which held great sentimental value for the victims. The jewellery belonged to their daughter, who suffered from spina bifida and had died.

Binnersley had also taken jewellery worth more than £10,000 from another Herne Bay Detective Constable Chris Owen said: "Charlotte Binnersley has caused great distress to a lot of people in the Herne Bay area.

Director delighted at chance of Bafta

By MARIJKE COX

A FILMMAKER has been nominated for a prestigious Bafta award for a gritty feature film revealing the life of tragic playwright Andrea Dunbar.

University of Kent film studies reader Clio Barnard, from Whitstable, was chosen for the commendation following the two-year project which took her back to her birthplace in Yorkshire, near to where the troubled Dunbar lived in Bradford.

Barnard's film, The Arbor, revisits the estate where the playwright lived and tells the powerful true story of Dunbar and her daughter Lorraine, who was just 10 when her mother died of a brain haemorrhage.

Using audio interviews Lorraine, relatives and residents from The Arbor – the street where Dunbar lived – Barnard created an autobiographical film with actors lipsynching to the pre-recorded voices.

'I didn't set out to make this kind of film and I had no agenda, but I spoke to Lorraine and it took me back to her mother's plays," said the director.

"Andrea Dunbar wrote her first play The Arbor when she was 15 and it was premiered at the Royal Court Theatre. She came from a deprived

Dunbar, who wrote the film Rita, Sue and Bob Too, was described as a "genius straight from the slums" and was just 29 when she dropped

Twenty-one years on Barnard's The Arbor tells the story of the playwright before shifting to the story of her daughter Lorraine who became ostracised from her mother's family and went to prison for the accidental death of her two-year-old son who ingested drugs.

Barnard said: "What happened was tragic. This looks at Andrea Dunbar's short life and life from Lorraine's point of view about her mother."

She admitted being surprised by her nomination for the Bafta 2011 Outstanding Debut for a British Writer, Director and Producer award.

She said: "I was incredibly pleased to learn about the BAFTA nomination I was in Bradford when I found out.

"I feel like it's not just for me but for the people living in The Arbor. I was in the right place to hear the news - it's good for everybody in the film."

The result will be announced on Sunday, February 13.

Park celebrating its newest arrival

STAFF at Howlett's Wild Animal Park were celebrating last week after the safe arrival of an elephant

The unnamed male calf was one of a pair of twins, an extremely rare incidence in African elephants, occurring in less than 2 per cent of cases.

Both calves were born naturally to Masa, the herd's matriarch, on Wednesday, January 25, following a 22 month pregnancy.

Sadly, the other calf died. However, in the wild the birth of twing inventibly received in the same case.

twins invariably results in the death of both mother and calves, so the survival of Masa and one of her calves was a great success.

Animal director Neil Spooner said: "We are delighted to welcome this new arrival into our successful herd and feel particularly blessed that both Masa and one of the calves survived a potentially fatal

"Twins are incredibly rare so it was certainly a surprise to us all. At a few days old the calf is doing really well and will be going into its outside enclosure where the public can see him as soon as the weather

Crunch time near for new Cameo apple

FRUIT fans will be able to enjoy a new variety of apple harvested in Kent this

Cameo apples are fast become a favourite thanks to their distinct sweet flavour, crunchy texture and good keeping qualities.

Experts say Cameo apples will stay fresh in the fruit bowl for up to seven days and up to two weeks in the fridge.

Discovered by chance in Washington, USA in the 1980s, Cameo is a cross between Golden Delicious and Red Delicious varieties. There are 150 acres of Cameo orchards in England, with 1850 tonnes being harvested annually.

The first crops were planted in 1998, and since then the apples have won numerous tasting competitions at the Marden Fruit Show. The apples combine a hint of grapefruit, a sweet blended honey and citrus taste and high levels of juice.

Melvyn Newman grows Cameos at Newmafruits Farm Ltd, just outside

Canterbury.
He said: "They have a distinct sweet flavour, they aren't too hard but have a great crunch."

Grower David Budd of Steven's Farm in Hawkhurst said: "Cameo is The thinking man's Gala' because it has many of the same qualities but a better flavour. No other apple comes close in terms of taste during the Cameo season.

Cameo apples are available from Tesco, Sainsbury's, Morrisons, Co-Op, Asda and Budgens.

Marching towards greater security

SECURITY has been brought to a previously unstable area east of Lashkar Gah in Helmand province, after the first entirely Afghan-planned and led operation in the district was carried out with the backing of troops from Canterbury.

Operation Zmaray Attal 4 was conceived and executed by the Afghan National Police and saw officers enter a Taliban-occupied area that has seen little presence in the past from the Afghan forces or authorities.

The operation was backed by troops from Delta Company, but the police's conduct was so professional and competent the soldiers from the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, based at Howe Barracks, had little more to do than watch.

The operation was part of a wider ANP drive towards more expansive operations in the area, crushing insurgent havens and bringing security and governance for local people.

It was launched on the back of information from locals, generated by ANP patrols on and around Route 601, a key route enabling trade and movement between Helmand and neighbouring Kandahar province.

As a result of the intelligence, local police chief Colonel Abdul Sattar and his officers believed some of the com-pounds to the south of their Sakar Wala checkpoint may have been used by the Taliban to hide improvised explosive devices, weapons and narcotics. The operation passed without any contacts or major finds, with clear indications that the ANP's highly visible patrols in the area - and growing overt support for the police among local people – have driven the insurgents from yet another population area. There was, however, one find of note during the searches conducted - a sawn-off shotgun which has been passed back to the forensic department at the ANP headquar-ters for analysis which could yield further intelligence.

Major Nick Wight-Boycott, officer commanding Delta Company, 5 Scots, said: "This operation was a significant landmark for the ANP - our sole input was to turn up.

"The Afghans are clearly putting into practice what we have been demonstrating to them over recent

"It is very satisfying to see Col Sattar and his men have the confidence to operate effectively.

Security in this area is now visible and the locals are happy to openly support the government of Afghanistan, safe in the knowledge that they are protected from the Taliban by the ANP. Quite simply, the insurgents are running out of places

PROTECTION: Wildwood Trust wants to reverse the planned privatisation of woodland

Coalition urged to rethink plans to sell woodland

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

A WILDLIFE charity is calling on the Government to introduce a new tax system it says would protect Britain's woodland by penalising wealthy landowners.
Canterbury-based Wildwood Trust says people should be taxed on the amount of land they own rather than the money they earn, thereby forcing those in possession of vast estates to sell their assets to avoid paying huge rates.

Chief executive Peter Smith says the Land Value Tax would also revitalise the UK economy and result in 95 per cent of the public being much better off.

His comments were made in response to the Government's plans to privatise much of England's woodland, which were debated in the House of Commons on Wednesday.

Just hours earlier the Forestry Commission – which owns and runs 18 per cent of England's woods, including Bedgebury in the High Weald

- announced plans to cut about 500 jobs. It also owns Hemsted Forest near Benenden, Kings Wood near Wye, Clowes

Wood near Canterbury and Lyminge Blocks.
Mr Smith said: "Land is the most crucial element to the protection of wildlife in this country, and it is the policy of Wildwood to reverse the sale of the public's land into private hands.

"The privatisation of land over the past 1,000 years has been a disaster for British wildlife. Further privatisation will continue this appalling history of loss.

"This country needs to create a network of commonly-owned land that can remain wild.

"Wildwood's vision for the creation of national woodlands is inspired by the work pioneered by the country's greatest ever statesmen, namely David Lloyd George and Sir Winston Churchill.

"This can be achieved at no cost to the taxpayer by a small change to our taxation system."

The Coalition has pledged to sell 15 per cent of the public forest estate by 2015, accounting for about 1,500 forests stretching more than 250,000 hectares.

A consultation was launched on Thursday, January 27, with four options for the dispos-

Mr Smith said he had been working with leading economist Fred Harrison – recognised by some as the first to predict the global financial crisis – on a new book and documentary that will include Wildwood's preference for a Land Value Tax system.

"Tax dodgers and large landowners would be very much worse off, and many would be forced to sell their land to others who could make better use of it," said Mr Smith.

"Wildlife would recover and landowners who put their land into a charitable trust with the objective of sustaining its wildlife would be exempt from the tax.

We are calling on the Government to protect wildlife and stop the sale of one of the nation's greatest assets.

University's bid to make work experience count to a degree

AS THE job market becomes ever more competitive, the University of Kent is looking at ways to include work experience in student's final degree scores, writes Gareth Arnold.

Many employers claim recent graduates are leaving university without the experience they need to impress top-level employers.

Dragons' Den star James Caan has suggested students should be able to gain extra marks towards their degrees from experience gained in the work place.

He said: "I have found over the years that graduates can fill three pages with details of their dissertations yet tell prospective employers nothing about their practical experience.

"How does the employer know whether they have the discipline to turn up for work every day? Whether they can take on responsibility? Or whether they are prepared to knuckle down to a task?"

The University of Kent is rising to the challenge, and a few courses already include a limited amount of credit based on work experience.

A university spokesman said: "The University of Kent's Centre for Professional Practice accredits work-based learning; in some courses, the placement year counts directly towards the degree classification, although to the limited extent of $10~{\rm per}$ cent.

For other courses that do not include a placement year, the university is introducing an Employability Points Scheme, where students are scored for acquiring a selection of work place skills.

A spokesman said: "We are seeking ways to recognise the acquisition of skills beyond the curriculum and expanding opportunities for employer engagement in curriculum design and delivery, as well as innovation and enter-

Mr Cann said more universities should be

dents losing out.

He said: "The job market has never been tougher. It is imperative that students are able to utilise and demonstrate all their skills as soon as possible to make them employable.

"Universities should do more to help students make the connection with businesses. Some Universities do more than others to help this process which inevitably means that there are students who miss out on opportunities like work placements because they don't know how to find them."

'Pathfinders' put in charge of local health budgets

Our lives and NHS funds in GPs' hands

HEALTHCARE reforms that By STEVE KNIGHT will see GPs take control of NHS funds are being piloted by six groups of doctors in Kent.

Known as 'Pathfinders', the consortia will work together to manage local budgets and purchase services for patients in areas of Thanet, Canterbury and Dover.

Such duties are currently performed by primary care trusts – of which there are currently three in Kent – but all 152 across the country are due to be abolished along with 10 strategic health authorities.

Future

The Pathfinders - which are split into Thanet, East Cliff, Ramsgate, C4 Canterbury, Whitstable and Dash (Deal, Ash and Sandwich Health) - will now begin testing the new arrangements to ensure they are working effectively before GPs take on statutory responsibilities in April, 2013.

Dr Mark Jones from C4 Canterbury said: "GP consortia, given the support and necessary resources to do the job properly, will be in a prime position to deliver healthcare that is fit for the future.

"But the work must start now and build on the engagement that already exists.

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

"This must not be about just another reorganisation but recognising this is an opportunity to build on the values and quality of general practice and, working with clinical and managerial colleagues, develop integrated services that are affordable and truly aim to improve patient care."

Late last year members of the Kent Local Medical Committee, which represents more than 1,300 GPs across the county, met to discuss the radical reforms set out in the Health Bill

While the move to doctor-led commissioning was broadly welcomed, there were concerns they would not be given the resources to do the job properly and that they would be blamed for shortcomings in an underfunded health service.

And in a national survey of 500 GPs and 500 hospital doctors, only 23 per cent believed the far-reaching changes to the NHS would lead to higher standards.

West Kent GP Dr Paul Blundell said at the time: "There is great potential it could result in greater efficiency and benefits for the patients. But I think the concern is that, like this current government, whatever merits there are, they will be handing out pain to people, and I hope we do not find ourselves tainted with the same problem by having to say sorry you cannot have this or

Meanwhile, the current chief executive of NHS Eastern and Coastal Kent has been appointed head of the newly-formed cluster of PCTs in the county. From April, Ann Sutton will be the sole chief executive of both NHS West Kent and NHS Medway, as well as Eastern and Coastal.

Efficiently

All three trusts are consolidating their teams in preparation for the GP handover, and plan to work closely with the doctors to transfer knowledge and expertise and to support the new consortia as they set up.

Ms Sutton said: "As well as supporting GP colleagues in setting up their commissioning expertise for the future, we must also ensure the health services people in Kent and Medway need today continue to be delivered properly and efficiently.

"I am looking forward to building on the progress we have made across the county in recent years to deliver even better health and care for residents."

QUESTION & ANSWER

How did KCR begin?

It started following a programme on A television which showed a Scout troop who had built a new hut thanks to money they had raised by recycling aluminium

I was interested and spoke with scrap metal merchants who told me not to bother, but that was like a red rag to a bull. I then bought all the horseshoe magnets I could get my hands on so that I'd be able to separate aluminium cans from steel cans. I made contact with the Aluminium Can Recycling Association who agreed to lend us machinery - and the rest is history!

Why is recycling important?

Recycling conservesnatural A resources, reduces energy consumption, protects our environment, supports community projects and creates jobs.

Do you only recycle drinks cans?

No, some years ago we decided to A widen our remit and we now recycle drinks cans, aerosols, biscuit tins, foil, cardboard, clothing, magazines, paper, newspapers, paperback books, food tins, plastic bottles and sweet tins.

Was it difficult to get started?

I recruited some helpers who wanted to earn some pocket money and we started collecting aluminium cans locally. However, my garage and garden were soon full of sacks and cans and premises loaned to us were soon filled.

We started up in July 1989 and by January the following year we opened the business premises we still have today. We were then able to collect from across Kent

Mhat did you do before KCR?

A I was exhibition manager of the Empire Hall, at Olympia, London in the Jubilee Year, then became a hotelier and a self-employed picture framer.

What's the future of recycling?

The EU is going to put greater pressure on local authorities to meet recycling targets. They in turn will have to put more pressure on individual households to recycle more. In the future it might be that we see a system where householders are fined for excess waste or not following proper procedures.

At KCR we offer an incentive to recyclers by paying them for their materials or donating the proceeds to a worthy cause of their choice.

Landfill space is running out - we cannot keep putting waste into the ground.

We couldn't live without the environment and yet we take very little care of it. We have caused massive damage to the environment and we need to put this

Advertising students win charity campaign

By SIAN GORDON

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SIX students from Canterbury Christchurch University have overcome strong opposition to win a Caldecott Foundation Award.

Advertising management undergraduates Elise Crespel-Parsons, Filip Novak, Natalia Hindi, Oliver Badcock, Gergana Stoyanova and Bogdan Petre won the award under their agency Sirius Advertising, after submitting advertising ideas for the Ashford based charity's 2011 Centenary Appeal.

A total of 50 students were involved in the campaign, which was designed to promote awareness and generate fundraising for the centenary year of the children's residential care home, based in Smeeth.

Sirius was one of seven teams that took part in a day-long live advertising pitch at the new Augustine House building in Canterbury. The groups were not told the details of the brief until that morning, when they had to present a full advertising plan to a panel of judges. The winning idea from Sirius was the presentation and development of a themed 1911 gala event, to travel back in time to the birth of the Caldecott Foundation. Ideas included authentic fashion and music to create a real sense of the era.

Sam Scott, from the Caldecott Foundation, said: "We were impressed by the extremely high calibre of ideas presented by all the agencies. However, Sirius stood out for us.

YOUR LETTERS

A Liberal litmus test for Coalition

The Liberal Democrat weekly newspaper published as its lead letter an attack by Cllr Michael Steed, of Canterbury, on the plan to elect police commissioners.

This follows an article on January 14 by Michael Meadowcroft, Liberal MP for Leeds West in 1983-87, condemning the plan. Other local government leaders have already spoken out. Kent Police Authority chair Anne Barnes wrote last year that the "Government's headlong rush towards US-style police commissioners is ill-conceived and badly timed".

Local Government Association vice-chair, Cllr Richard Kemp, has pointed out the cost of these new elected posts could equate to 700 officers on the beat.

"If the police are to be truly held to account at local level, then councils must be at the heart of any new system," he said. Lib Dems opposed to this Conservative plan are hoping to debate it at the party's spring conference. Cllr Steed will be one of the representatives at this conference. Text of Cllr Steed's letter in Liberal Democrat News:

Jonathan Davies's response to Michael Meadowcroft's attack on Conservative proposals for directlyelected police commissioners was ostensibly about getting the Liberal Democrats ready for this innovation. But it really adds another argument to those Michael presented. The election of a single person to run what he rightly calls "huge police authority areas" will be inherently difficult for those who recognise the complexity of policing issues, and easy for those presenting simplistic answers to the problem of crime. It is a gift to the tabloid press and Murdoch empire.

Indeed, since the Tories are not proposing a break-up of local authorities with separate elected commissioners for each local government service, their singling out of the police gives the game away.

It is intended as a sop to their own Right wing, the erstwhile hang 'em and flog 'em brigade. It springs from the unhealthy obsession of some on the Right to be tough on crime. In the United States, where this obsession is widespread even in the centre ground of politics, the effect leads to a much higher crime level than in Europe, which in turn feeds the obsession. This was con-ceived as a deeply illiberal proposal and Lib Dems must fight it. For many of us, its fate will be a litmus test of how far Lib Dem ministers can protect liberal values within the Coalition.

Time to rethink life's direction

What kind of person steals a charity box from a place of worship? I'm glad they've locked this guy up.

Maybe at some point in the next two years and six months he will take a good hard look at himself and sort his life out.

Cuts will damage most vulnerable

Hundreds of people in Kent will miss out on essential free advice as a result of Government cuts.

Legal aid advice services across the country, which provide free help with issues such as education, employment, debt, welfare benefits and housing, are crucial in making sure the poorest and most vulnerable are treated fairly.

However, Government plans to slash funding will mean many local services will have no other choice than to close their doors to people in need of free legal advice.

The scale of the cuts is such that there will be few places for them to turn and many more people are likely to end up at their MP's door.

Shelter Kent is one such service which will be under threat. The charity estimates it will no longer be able to help 75 percent of its clients in Kent.

The charity is warning that people will not be able to get help or advice until they are in court on the verge of losing their home. Shelter is urging Kent MPs to take action to protect legal aid funding and the crucial help it provides.

Getting the right advice early on can save £10 for every £1 invested and help keep families together in their homes, in work and in education. The Government's proposed cuts to legal aid will have a devastating impact and essentially takes away many people's first line of defence when they fall on hard times. Shelter is one of many organisations delivering this lifeline to people struggling with all sorts of issues and we see every day the difference it can make to people's lives. But with so many threats on the horizon, such as unemployment and rising interest rates, we are extremely concerned that many more people will struggle to make ends meet and won't be able to hang on to their home without help.

When there are problems with benefits, when debts mount up, when they are exploited by landlords, there will be nowhere to turn. Regardless of who is providing it, services like those Shelter offers in Kent must be protected or it will be the poorest and most vulnerable who suffer.

KCC roads chief loses his job in cabinet reshuffle

A SHAKE-UP of County Hall's cabinet has seen former road chief Nick Chard replaced.

Kent County Council leader Paul Carter announced the new line-up on Friday ahead of the re-organisation due to take place in April where senior staff will be culled and a new structure introduced.

The replacement of Cllr Chard, who was Tory cabinet member for environment, highways and waste for 18 months and previously finance member, was the only major change.

His deputy Bryan Sweetland takes over, but Cllr Chard will remain on the council and it is proposed that he will be chairman of the Health Overview and Scrutiny Committee.

Cllr Chard, who has had to deal with mounting problems with potholes and heavy snow and previously the Icelandic bank losses, said it had been a privilege working as cabinet member for environment, highways and waste.

"It has been an exciting time; two cold winters with heavy snow, thousands of potholes repaired, the start of the East Kent Waste agreement, two rail summits, great strides in environmental sustainability and a reduction in road casualties that exceeded Government targets," he said. "I wish my successor well. He will have similar challenges which officers, I know, will successfully take in their stride.

The new cabinet is Paul Carter as leader; John Simmonds, finance and procurement; Roger Gough, business strategy and support; Mike Hill, customer and communities; Sarah Hohler, education, learning and skills; Bryan Sweetland, environment, highways and waste; Kevin Lynes, regeneration and economic development; Graham Gibbens, older people's services (including public health); and Jenny Whittle, specialist children's services.

Book writes our women warriors back into history

EPIC tales of unsung heroines who were written out of history by their male peers have been revealed in a new book.

Author Rosalind Miles and acclaimed military historian Robin Cross have published the book Warrior Women to bring the hidden achievements of females through the ages to

From Boudicca, Queen of the Iceni people, who led an uprising against the occupying Romans, to the lesser known World War Two German aviator Hanna Reitsch, the book unveils the bravery of history's heroines, which was rarely recorded.

Dr Miles, who lives in Faversham, said women were systematically denied any coverage through the years.

"They always fought on the frontline side by side with men. It's a myth that men fought and women wept at home – men did-n't do all that alone," she said.

"During times of plenty men could afford to keep women in a life of luxury. Some weren't allowed to leave the house.

"Beatrix Potter was one. She complained that she was always feeling faint because she was dying of boredom.
"Women were told they needed men to protect them, which wasn't true but the idea developed through civilisation."

Dr Miles, who wrote the international bestseller Who Cooked the Last Supper, said choosing which women to include was a hard task with a choice of hundreds.
"I went for variety and chose women from the three services; land, sea and air,' she said.

Dr Miles said one of her favourites was Lt Col Martha McSally who was in the US air forcxe the first American woman to fly in battle since the lifting of the 1991 women in combat ban.

Dr Miles said she wanted people to get a sense of the exceptional courage of women through the ages.

"The idea that women are weaker and emotional is just an idea put in their heads over the years while they were oppressed," she said. "This may not change, but I want people to get a sense of women's resourcefulness and capabilities.

She admitted, however, there was still a long way to go where society still did not know the extent of female bravery.

"For example Celtic women taught men to fight. Women were customised to the rituals of birth and death so they took charge.

"Women are strong mentally. Strength isn't about size, it's mental attitude.

"Women are programmed to have babies and whether they want that or not they see that continuity in life. There is survival

But Dr Miles admitted that society had not made much progress.

"Even now there are not that many women in senior positions in Parliament," she said. "I don't think things will ever really change. Men have never been known to give up power willingly.

"And most women don't actually want to take it. This view of women being weaker has suited many of them quite well and it's encouraged some to be lazy.

She also berated the behaviour of former Sky Sports pundits Andy Gray and Richard Keys, whose sexist remarks were exposed two weeks ago.

"It's a joke that they feel superior to women and probably to other men, too. They fancy themselves, but they're getting older, balder and fatter. They're insecure," she said.

"Men are insecure. Look at suicide bombers, they are men. You don't get women doing it because they are mentally stronger."
• Warrior Women will be published on Thursday, March 3.

School heads revolt over vulnerable pupils

COUNTY Hall leader Paul Carter is planning to lead a delegation of headteachers to Whitehall in a bid to stop London boroughs dumping looked-after children in Kent, writes Marijke Cox.

It comes after schools in one of the most deprived districts said they had been forced to breach education laws by refusing to take on children from outside the county.

The decision by the eight headteachers from Thanet Heads Groups follows mounting pressure on school resources as London authorities continue to dump youngsters in the area.

Cheaper

Schools say they are reaching breaking point trying to cope with the demand, and feel they have no other option but to refuse admission until the Government changes the law.

Paul Luxmore, head of Dane Court Grammar School in Broadstairs and King Ethelbert School in Birchington, said schools are obliged to take on looked-after children from outside the county.

"What we are finding, however, is local authorities – a lot of the time the London boroughs – are placing children in Thanet where it is cheaper and there are lots of foster carers, but Thanet is one of the most deprived areas in Kent.

"Half of the looked-after children here are out-of-county, and we're struggling to cope we have indigenous children in care who we have to provide for too."

Mr Luxmore said he was also concerned that children were being taken out of their local environment and placed in unfamiliar surroundings.

"Most looked-after children are damaged or affected by what has happened to them in their lives and therefore a school has to have the resources to cope with that, which places a greater pressure on schools," he said

Mr Luxmore said eight out of 10 headteachers from the Thanet Heads Group had decided to make a stand and refuse to take on any more out-of-county looked-after children until the matter had been addressed by Gwernment by Government.

"We don't want to break the law, what we want to do is make the law sensible.

want to do is make the law sensible.
"We want to love and look after these children and give them the best we can, but it's hard with such high demand."

Education chiefs at County Hall have admitted it was a problem and that there was massive pressure on Kent.

Leader of KCC Paul Carter said he would speak to Mr Luxmore and get a delegation of heads together to see schools minister Tim Loughton to discuss the problem.

Gravesend-based independent education advisor Peter Read said although he sympathised with the headteachers, breaking the law was not the answer.

"Firstly, what the heads are doing is illegal and secondly, it is depriving these children of an education."

Street crime maps 'could raise fears'

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

NEW interactive maps showing people how much crime there is where they live have been branded a "gimmick" by the head of the county's Police Federation.

Ian Pointon said it was not clear what the system was meant to achieve and that money should be spent more wisely by government, such as on frontline policing.

The Kent Police Federation chair warned the new crime maps, which cost £300,000 to roll out nationwide, could also be counterproductive in reducing fear of crime.

"There could be 20 incidents of anti-social behaviour showing up in your area, but they could be something to do with a bit of noise or inconsiderate parking," said Mr Pointon.

Safe county

"Kent is a safe county – it's not a dangerous place to live – but this could scare people. "Kent Police has been working to stop fear

"Kent Police has been working to stop fear of crime and yet this potentially heightens that fear."

The scheme allows residents to see what crime has been reported where they live within the past month by typing in their postcode at www.police.uk.

Figures for Kent's main towns varied, but in all cases the number of anti-social behaviour reports was high. The centre of Tunbridge Wells saw 170 cases of antisocial behaviour and 32 violent crimes among its figures, with a total of 328 crimes

Margate town saw 438 crimes, 193 of those antisocial behaviour and 76 violent crime.

Ashford centre had 242 crimes and Maidstone 469, 166 of those antisocial behaviour, 28 vehicle crimes and 61 violent crimes.

Visitors to the site are also given information about beat meetings and how to contact their local policing team.

their local policing team.

Mr Pointon said: "Tm not quite sure what the system is supposed to achieve.

"My fear is this is something of a gimmick. If money is going to be thrown at anything, it should be more police officers."

But others welcomed the scheme.

Chair of Kent Police Authority Ann Barnes said she was delighted street-level crime mapping had been launched.

"Transparency and openness should be at the heart of every public service," she said. "Now for the first time the public will be able to see where crime is taking place, as well as information on how to contact their local neighbourhood officer."

Kent Police's Deputy Chief Constable Alan Pughsley added: "By making this information available, we aim to raise awareness of what we're doing to tackle crime and disorder and how people can support the police."

The new site was developed by the National Policing Improvement Agency on behalf of the Home Office.

Readers never had it so good

WE HAD IT SO GOOD BY LINDA GRANT

AWARD-winning novelist Linda Grant pulls apart the dreams of the baby-boom generation.

Her book follows the lives of Stephen and Andrea from idealistic student days in Oxford through hippie squats, radical chic and a slow descent into middle-aged and middle-class respectability in north London.

The story crosses the Atlantic back to Stephen's American childhood and across to eastern Europe as well as covering the aftermath of 9/11 and the London Tube bombings.

Political events are mirrored by private tragedies as the naive optimism of the 1960s slowly dribbles away and long-buried family secrets come to the surface.

But Grant, who has been shortlisted for the Booker Prize in the past, never lets the story stumble and her deft characterisation and readable style brings her characters and their small circle of family and friends vividly to life.

We Had It So Good is published in hardback

by Virago, priced £14.99.

Also available now is The Secret Lives of Dresses by Erin McKean, published in paperback by Hodder, priced £6.99.

This debut novel follows Dora, a college student who is coasting along in life.

Dora is in love with a man who only appreciates her business skills and she is delaying deciding what to do with her life. But then her world is turned upside down when her grandmother Mimi has a stroke.

Intent on acting out Mimi's wishes, Dora rushes home to take over the running of her grandmother's cherished vintage store. Here, while distracting herself with the store's retro glamour, she discovers that a secret life has been written for each item in the shop.

Through reading these captivating stories she learns more about her grandmother and herself - and realises that she is ready to take on the future after all.

McKean's gentle, stylish and bittersweet tale is made even more enjoyable due to her obvious love and knowledge of timeless fashion. And finally, 42: Douglas Adams' Amazingly Accurate Answer to Life, the Universe and Everything by Peter Gill is published by Beautiful Books, priced £8.99.

In The Hitchhiker's Guide, Douglas Adams said 42 was the answer to the ultimate question of life, the universe and everything.

The name of this debut book by Peter Gill appears to suggest an ultimate answer to Adams' ultimate answer. Instead what we actually get is a series of facts – random if it weren't for the common theme of the number.

The author makes no secret of how the book was thrown together, even stating that a small donation will be made to Wikipedia for every book sold: Oh dear.

The book concludes that 42 means nothing and is interchangeable, so the last 300-plus pages were inconsequential. I read all 333 pages of this book: How I wish there had been only 42.

CINEMA

THE FIGHTER (15)

NOMINATED for seven Oscars, including three nods for its supporting cast, The Fighter is an incredible story of triumph against adversity both in and out of the box-

The brutal and physically demanding sport has frequently been a magnet for plaudits.

In 1977, Rocky pummelled the opposition at the Oscars, winning best picture and best director, four years later, Raging Bull landed Robert De Niro a deserved Academy Award as best actor for his riveting portrayal of Jake

More recently, Denzel Washington entered the Academy Awards ring with his powerful embodiment of wrongly imprisoned boxer Rubin "Hurricane" Carter and director Clint Eastwood delivered a knockout blow with Million Dollar Baby, earning Hilary Swank her second Oscar.

The Fighter provides all of the usual emotional jabs and cuts as its working class hero defies the odds for one shot at glory.

Tensions between the pugilist and his family threaten to derail his championship bid, culminating in the obligatory final flurry to coax the audience to its feet.

Micky (Mark Wahlberg) is a talented boxer from Massachusetts, but he has always languished in the shadow of his half brother Dicky (Christian Bale), who famously knocked down Sugar Ray Leonard then lost everything to the ravages of drugs and crime.

Trained by Dicky and managed by his monstrous mother, Alice (Melissa Leo), Micky accepts lacklustre fights for scant rewards until he is persuaded to cut himself loose from his loved ones and punch above his weight for the first time in his life.

New girlfriend Charlene (Amy Adams), who works in a local bar, encourages Micky to follow his dreams, incurring the wrath of the rest of the Ward clan, who resent outsiders from interfering in family business

Sure enough, Micky tastes victory and as his confidence grows, he faces the possibility of a shot at the world light welterweight title. The Fighter is well crafted by director

David O Russell, juxtaposing Micky's strug-gle for self-belief and self-respect with his unwavering love for his selfish and selfdestructive family.

Wahlberg's non-performance is virtually mute next to Bale and Leo in full scenery chewing flow, who compete for honours as the loudest caricature on the Ward family tree.

Thankfully, Adams brings nuances to her ballsy barmaid, who will literally slug it out for her man.

The Fighter punches to win with directorial flair but in a brawl with Raging Bull, Rocky or Million Dollar Baby, O'Russell's film would be knocked out in the final round.

A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN (12A)

IN 1992, Goldie Hawn clashed with Meryl Streep for Bruce Willis's affections in the black comedy Death Becomes Her.

Now death becomes her Oscar-nominated daughter, Kate Hudson, in Nicole Kassell's emotionally manipulative weepie.

Terminal illness provides the seemingly unassailable obstacle between the film's spirited heroine and true love, feverishly plucking our heartstrings as we watch a vivacious high-flyer wither into a bed ridden young woman teetering on the brink of death

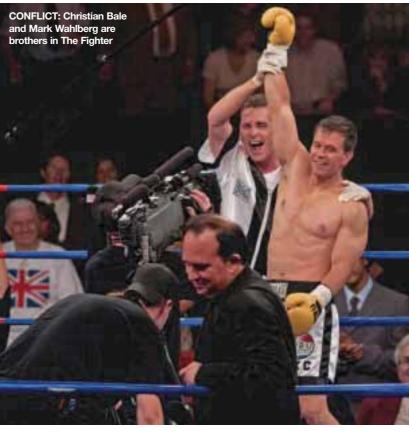

Only the coldest and stoniest hearts will resist the urge to shed a few tears

Marley Corbett (Hudson) is full of energy and surrounded by great friends and has everything to live for – except that she doesn't.

A routine check up at the local hospital reveals shocking news: she has cancer and the disease has spread too far for chemotherapy to have any positive effect.
Supported by handsome doctor, Julian

Goldstein, Marley comes to terms with impending death, sharing the diagnosis with her clucky mother and emotionally distant father. Thankfully, Julian is a tower of strength and as Marley prepares for her passing, she falls hopelessly in love with him.

A Little Bit of Heaven reduces most of the audience to snivelling wrecks, orchestrating the goodbyes and reconciliations in quick succession to ensure that Marley shifts her mortal coil with her affairs in order.

Hudson is well cast. She is naturally outgoing and bubbly, so there is a sobering contrast between her character at different stages of the disease.

However, she shares an inert screen chemistry with her leading man, who doesn't convince for a second as a medic.

There are some strong performances topped off with a couple of scenes for Whoopi Goldberg as God, or at least how Marley chooses to see the Higher Power.

That's what repeatedly watching Ghost on DVD will get you.

SANCTUM 3D (15)

INSPIRED by true events, which were presumably far more thrilling than anything in Alister Grierson's waterlogged film, Sanctum charts the ordeal of a group of cave divers trapped below ground during a freak storm.

In real life, all of the stricken adventurers escaped the subterranean tomb.

On the big screen, writers John Garvin and Andrew Wight prefer a much more tragic resolution, consigning most of the cast to watery graves, mistakenly believing that an increasing body count will spark dramatic tension. Their script is one splashing flipper shy of campy hilarity and neither writer has a sharp ear for convincing dialogue.

So it's a blessing that so much of the film unfolds underwater with the cast sucking hungrily on a dwindling air supply, unable to spout another clunky cliche.

In almost every respect, Sanctum should have gone straight to DVD... except for the excellent use of state-of-the-art 3D camera technology developed by executive producer James Cameron.

Viewing the film's strangely beautiful world through uncomfortable plastic spectacles, we truly feel submerged alongside the actors as they navigate treacherous fissures in the rock, emerging into cavernous spaces teeming with microscopic life. Visually at least, his film takes our breath away.

What you see is what you get with legends of the folk scene ED HILL meets Irish stalwarts The Dubliners

THE Dubliners have been on the road for nearly 50 years, which is an amazing feat for a band whose origins began as an informal get together at O'Donoghue's Pub in their home city.

The line-up may have changed but that relaxed ethos has remained the same.

John Sheahan joined in 1964 and has been a stalwart of the group ever since. He, along with the latest incarnation of the band, will be performing at Tunbridge Wells' Assembly Hall Theatre in March, as part of a European tour.

"When I first started I still had a day job and sneaked off to do gigs at night," he explains. "I worked as a draftsman for the electricity supply board. When I decided to go full time I thought it would just last for two or three years, after that I would get my old job back. I certainly never thought it would mean nearly half a century on the road."

John was encouraged at school to learn the home-grown melodies.

He said: "We had a wonderful teacher who played the tin whistle and got a few of us interested. That was my first introduction to music. I then went on to study the violin at the school of music for four or five years."

The Dubliners became trailblazers for spreading the popularity of Irish folk around the world. Their regular tours across Europe introduced it to cultures with their own traditions in music making. But John says it has elemental strengths that result in fans well beyond Ireland's shores.

He said: "It transcends barriers such as language. I think it generates an atmosphere and spirit that people just want to become involved in. The fast songs can be very rhythmic and uplifting and make people want to dance but then you have a complete contrast with the slow airs and the laments. It runs across the whole gamut of emotions."

That appeal is something other musicians have latched onto. Bands such as U2, Moving Hearts, and most famously The Pogues, with which the Dubliners shared their biggest hit – the Irish Royer in 1987 – have all acknowledged the influence they have had on their own music.

"It's nice to hear things like that but we had no idea as we went through the years that we were having that kind of impact," says John.

In the latest tour there will be many of the familiar tunes but new material is always being created, beginning with the lyrics.

John said: "We leave it up to the singers. If they have a new song we have a listen. We then try and work something around it. It doesn't have to be a traditional song, it can be a new one put into our style.

The members of the group know each other so well rehearsal is rarely necessary but singer Séan Cannon keeps them on their toes.

John said: "We can have a gap of a month and just turn up at a gig and start playing without any chat beforehand, but I have to listen carefully to Séan. When he is centre stage anything could be coming next. It certainly helps your concentration when you don't know the key the next song might be in."

Handmade

And the Dubliners are still gaining new fans attracted by their authenticity.

John said: "I asked a little girl in Germany what she liked about us. She said I like the Dubliners because you do 'handmade' music. I suppose what you see on stage is what you get. It's just fiddles, banjos, guitars and tin whistles. There are no hidden synthesizers or effects. That basic approach seems to resonate with an audience.

"Our crowds are made up of people across the ages and from all sorts of backgrounds, as long as they can get out they'll come along.

And the solid tradition of music in Ireland is as strong as ever.

John said: "There's no sign of any decline, in fact the opposite. There is a great wealth of young musicians and the standard they play is really inspiring. I think people will always need that direct approach of picking up an instrument and, without any accompaniment, coming out with a tune.

Touring has always been the main focus of the band despite steady record sales and the downside of modern travel.

"Long journeys on the road can be tiring but I never get tired of playing music. That is always a joy. Once you are on stage and you get the reaction from the audience you are away.

"A lot of pop groups used to tour to sell records but it has always been the main part of our living and livelihood." And it's the band's informal friendship that has kept the Dubliners going all these years later, according to John: "We just go from year to year without any long term plan and there are no contractual pressures to stay together.

"We had a manager once who said we had to formalise things, so he got a solicitor to draw up a contract to bind us each to the band. "This went on for a few days and we said forget about it, let's just carry on as we are and we tore it up. There has always been great camaraderie among the group. It's like an extended family and that makes for good

The fairer sex take to the playhouse

SET in the 1660s, Playhouse Creatures examines the plight of the first actresses to legally appear on stage - strutting their stuff in an old converted bearpit.

The bawdy tale is set in a time when it was considered women had 'no business in show business'.

on the earthy underbelly of 17th century actresses' lives, and the short journey from prostitute to actress and back.

Mrs Betterton is getting old and losing her looks, so she seeks to pass on her acting 'knowledge' to the younger Mrs Farley and Mrs Marshall. Then the pushy youngster. Nell Gwynne comes crashing into their world, determined to work her way up from orangeseller to actress.

Stirring up the laughs

By Sarah O'Meara

WITH her mane of white, fluffy hair, loud voice and red Christian Louboutin heels, American chef Anne Burrell seems more rock 'n' roll than your average TV chef.

With a background in Italian cooking, she loves to laugh her head off in the kitchen while whipping up a three-course meal.

Burrell explains her style of foodie TV, now

Burrell explains her style of foodie TV, now being broadcast for the first time on Food Network UK, is a little different to the "stand and stir" format of many food shows.

"I think I bring a fun perspective. I encourage people to be less uptight in the kitchen," says the 41-year-old.

It's true she seems utterly relaxed, giggling

It's true she seems utterly relaxed, giggling and laughing as she plunges her hands into bowls of meat to produce delicious-looking meatballs, while describing in a twangy East Coast drawl just how much fun she's having. "I like to teach people why they do things, not just how, so they learn without knowing they're being taught."

On her show, Secrets Of A Restaurant Chef, Burrell reveals her concise, easy-to-master techniques of a top-level chef – skills which first came to the public's attention six years ago when she was asked by top chef Mario Batali to join him on Iron Chef America as one of his sous chefs.

The show, which is based on a Japanese cult programme and is a huge phenomenon in the States, puts chefs to the test. In each episode, they have one hour to cook and improvise a multi-course meal, and Burrell says the contestants' commitment is intense.

In her own show, Burrell's natural energy and happy-go-lucky demeanour bring basic dishes such as wild mushroom risotto to life, and she uses her own experience of high-end cooking at top restaurants in New York to help people translate their favourite restaurant experiences into amazing meals.

Currently focusing on filming new episodes while writing her first book, to be released in the spring, Burrell says she doesn't mind being manically busy. "I'm fortunate to have found a field that satisfies me so completely and I'm eager to spend more time in the UK," she says. "The first thing I do when I visit is have fish and chips and mushy peas, and then treacle pudding with toffee sauce. I'll then have dreams about the pudding.

"Tve also had scotch eggs and meat pieces since I've been here. Oh my gosh..." Burrell believes the key to great cooking is Burrell believes the key to great cooking is to relax: "Make sure you're in a place where you feel comfortable cooking. Food is like a dog, it smells fear."

RESTAURANT REVIEW BY MARIJKE COX

ON A cold Tuesday night in January most people would expect restaurants in even the busiest of towns to be a little thin on the ground in terms of diners.

So it was a welcome relief when after just 10 minutes of arriving to an empty Thailand Tom in Hythe the place started to fill – after all, no one likes to be the only customer – and by the time my dining companion and I left there was a real buzz about the place.

Tucked away on the town's high street you could be forgiven for missing it, but word seems to have spread since it opened last year and, judging by the familiarity of the staff with some of the customers, it has established what looks to be quite a local following.

The interior is contemporary and fresh with exposed wooden beams and bright white walls and mirrors. A friendly waiter showed us to a table before handing us our menus, which offered those Thai favourites at very reasonable prices.

Despite being a bit of a wimp when it comes to hot food (my definition of living life on the culinary spiciness edge is choosing a tikka masala over a korma) I decided to start with a soup even though – from previous experience which quite literally ended in tears – I knew they were renowned for being very hot.

But the Tom Kha soup with chicken (£3.50) was delicious and delivered just as much heat as I could handle. The flavour was fresh and tasty and, if anything, I could have eaten another bowlful.

My guest went for the Tom Yum soup with chicken (£3.50) which was packed with flavour and a must for anyone who enjoys spicy food.

On to the mains and I chose a massaman beef curry $(\pounds 7.95)$ and coconut rice $(\pounds 1.95)$ and my dining companion the ayam lamb $(\pounds 12.50)$ – which was brought out on a sizzler and the sauce poured over the meat at the table – plus jasmine rice $(\pounds 1.95)$.

The curry was full of spice and flavour and the melt-in-your-mouth beef was possibly some of the tastiest meat I had eaten for years. Topped with peanuts and combined with sticky coconut rice, this curry is now a firm Thai favourite for me.

My guest's ayam lamb was also fresh and delicious and after he had finished the beautifully tender lamb we both grabbed a spoon and scraped what was left of the sauce, which contained mint, garlic and wine mixed with spices, from the bottom of the sizzler dish.

Stuffed to the brim, we side-stepped desserts but sat back and enjoyed our drinks.

For tasty authentic Thai food in relaxed and stylish surroundings Thailand Tom is a must.

And with the prices so reasonable – £39 for two – you won't break the bank or feel guilty

Spring 2011 is destined to be the season of bright colours. Designers such as Marc Jacobs, Lanvin and Calvin Klein (who notoriously loves monochrome) have been styling their models in bright red. Cheryl Cole, Frankie Sandford and Rachel McAdams have been seen wearing scarlet jackets and dresses on the red carpet too. So when you go out to the shops and purchase an outfit in red for Valentine's Day, you'll be ultra- fashionable for the rest of the season too!

To make sure you rock this look, mix bold dresses with simple accessories and, to avoid looking OTT, incorporate this season's other big trend – neutral and cream tones. Subtle heart-shaped jewellery will look great and finish off your lovely look, whilst bows and polka dots will add a fun flourish to any outfit.

So if you want a knock-out dress or aspire to look effortlessly casual, Whitefriars Canterbury has the perfect clothes and accessories to showcase your beauty.

Keep Kent Working! It's jobs for Kent

Vorking! Employers urged to support apprentices

National Trust offers trainees vital experience

THE National Trust is offering six-month work placements for unemployed young people at the former Kent home of Winston Churchill.

Since March last year, Chartwell in Westerham, near Sevenoaks, has taken on four trainees, who have become fully immersed in all areas of the estate's work, including gardening, website design and exhibition planning.

And while the scheme will come to an end next month, the National Trust will be taking on new trainees before the end of the spring.

One of those to have benefited is Jonathon Primmer, who is now working with the conservation team as well as researching for a new exhibition at Chartwell.

He said: "I was looking for any relevant employment to get my foot in the door, and I stumbled upon this trainee position.

"It has exceeded all expectations, providing me with training and practical, work-related experience so important to employers

"I now see it as a vital part of my future employability."

Early last year, the National Trust embarked on the Future Jobs Fund scheme in conjunction with the Department of Work and Pensions, whereby a number of the trust's properties would take on young people aged 18-24 who have been out of work for more than six months.

The trust hopes the scheme will provide young employees with training and experience to better their chances of getting work.

Senior administrator Susan Rattray said: "We hope young people will see these posts as an opportunity to boost their skills in a unique environment."

EMPLOYERS throughout Kent are being encouraged to show their support for the workforce of tomorrow as part of National Apprenticeship Week.

Running from Monday to Friday, the programme aims to highlight the talents and skills young people can bring to an organisation, and also to celebrate the value of apprenticeships.

Applications are also now open for the National Apprenticeship Awards, which are open to all organisations that employ apprentices, as well as to the apprentices Rachel McKellar - South East regional director for the National Apprenticeship Service (NAS) - said: "I would urge all South East employers and apprentices to enter this year's awards.

"They recognise and reward employers and apprentices, and provide an opportunity to showcase their achievements on a regional and national basis.

"Every year it's breathtaking to see firsthand how these inspirational apprentices are making such a positive impact on their employers and on the local community."

Last year, 20-year-old retail management apprentice Holly Manley, from Dartford, was named National Apprentice of the Year.

The NAS says Holly is a shining example of how apprenticeships provide training to expand career horizons, having been promoted from supervisor to store manager at Superdrug in a matter of months.

She said: "Winning the National Apprentice of the Year 2010 has opened a lot of doors for me. It's amazing to be selected from all the apprentices nationwide, and such a boost to know that all your hard work is being recognised.

For this year's awards the NAS will be listing England's top 100 apprenticeship employers, as well as giving separate awards for the small, medium, large and macro employers of the year.

Entries close on March 25. Visit www.apprenticeships.org.uk/awards for more information.

Meanwhile, several Kent training providers are holding activities to help promote National Apprenticeship Week.

Canterbury College is hosting an interactive exhibition at Whitefriars in the city centre from Tuesday to Friday, covering a wide variety of courses on offer. These include childcare, accounting, and plumbing, Student demonstrations will be held, with interest welcome from potential students, schools, parents and businesses.

MidKent College is holding an employer event promoting apprenticeships to local small and medium enterprises, as well as two open evenings for school leavers and those already in employment to discuss how to get on to an apprenticeship.

Finally, the Medway branch of Connexions - the Medway Youth Trust - will hold an open morning on Wednesday to advise young people on what apprenticeships are available, how much money they can expect to earn and more.

Battle of bands could lead to music career

A COUNTY-wide 'battle of the bands' competition is being held to promote training and potential careers in the recording industry.

The Music Clash '11 contest is being run by Kent County Council and sponsored by Canterbury Christ Church University's Broadstairs campus, with support from Kent Music and the charity Rhythmix.

Winners will spend a day at the university's recording studios, where an expert sound technician will add some professional polish to their work.

They will also receive tips for succeeding in the music industry during a master class led by one of the professionals who teach at the campus.

Campus director Dr Andrew Gower said: "We're delighted to be sponsoring this important event and supporting Kent's young musical talent.

"The university is keen to encourage musical interest and talent at all ages, and we hope the experience of taking part in events like Music Clash will encourage our county's talented young musicians to take up opportunities for study - whatever their musical taste, style or background."

Young musicians from all genres are invited to upload a short video of an original piece of work to www.musicclash.kent.gov.uk, which will then be rated by the public over the next two months.

The top five entries will also win the chance to perform their songs at a live gig which will be filmed for the internet.

Cllr Roger Gough, Kent County Council's cabinet member for corporate support services, said: "This is a fantastic chance for all young people to get involved in Kent's thriving music scene.

"All participants will get great exposure and the winners will receive a real boost to their careers with insider knowledge from experts at Canterbury Christ Church University's Broadstairs campus.'

Creating the light fantastic

DISADVANTAGED youngsters from Canterbury helped to create a light graffiti' exhibition, organised by the University for the Creative Arts (UCA).

The LightTAG project offered workshops throughout the South East, where participants were taught how coloured LED lights can create light drawings and animations through an innovative camera technique.

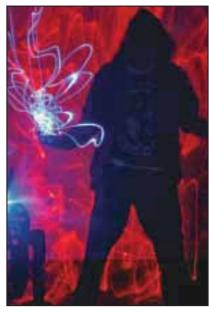

A launch event will be held at London's BFI on Friday, followed by a tour of galleries in the South East.

UCA visual artist Tine Bech said: "LightTAG has been a fantastic experience for everybody involved.

"The young people who participated have created a really visually engaging project.

"One of the project goals is to show youth culture in a positive light and increase the visibility of young people's voices, which I think we've achieved.

"We often forget that universities don't just award degrees, but connect with communities, with businesses and, in this case, with young people."

Skills course at Connexions

CONNEXIONS has been awarded the contract to deliver the Prince's Trust Team Programme in Kent.

The 12-week scheme is open to young people aged 16-24, who are currently looking to develop their confidence, learn new skills and get into work.

Courses are now available in Dover, Swale and Maidstone.

Chief executive Sean Kearns said: "The Team Programme has an excellent track record in helping people move into jobs, training or education, and we are delighted to be working with the Prince's Trust and Mid Kent College on this programme.

"The course offers an exciting challenge to those wanting to develop their skills and gain a nationally-recognised qualification."

The programme consists of a residential week, community project, CV writing and interview skills, work placements, fundraising and other practical experiences. The course is free and will not affect those receiving jobseekers' allowance.

Orlando the ideal family trip

First Drive

MATTJOY

Chevrolet Orlando

YOU can't hide the fact that you will have to trade in that entertaining sports car or hot hatch of yours one day, for something a little more sensible.

Squeezing a child seat into the back of a Porsche 911 is deeply inconsiderate, though the thought of owning an MPV might give you sleepless nights.

But car manufacturers are perceptive in keeping up with our needs and wants, and Chevrolet has answered the above problem with the Orlando.

The rest of the Chevrolet range is a familiar sight in the UK now, and the quality of the product has been improving healthily with each new car. That bodes well for the Orlando (from £16,395), which not only has to cope with the quality of the opposition, but also the hard life that kids, dogs and life in general will throw at it.

It looks something of a cross between an SUV and a people carrier. The combination of big windows and an SUV-like height offers an excellent driving position.

Pushing buttons is no chore either, partly because the equipment level is good regardless of which model you choose but also because the cabin quality is the best yet to come from Chevrolet.

The design itself is smart, with a deliberate deep centre panel dividing the space between the two front seat occupants. Higher spec models have tasteful pianoblack trim and leather on the steering wheel, all of which help to push up the classy feel.

Of greater importance to a buyer in this segment however is space, and the Orlando is certainly not short of it.

Three rows of seats mean this is a sevenseater with ease, and even with the third row in place there is a respectable 89 litres of boot space on offer.

Drop to five seats and this goes up to a generous 727 litres, and a giant 1,487 with two rows folded.

Apart from space, equipment and good value the Orlando has other talents. For a start, the 2.0-litre diesel is exactly what you would expect from a good quality, modern unit. There is power easily accessible through much of the rev range, and the gearchange on the standard six-speed

But even more surprising than that is the way the Orlando responds to your inputs. The steering isn't mushy or vague, and the suspension being slightly firmer than you might expect means it won't loll around in corners either.

It has not become a hot hatch and it will still swallow bumps without upsetting everyone on board, but the fact that it will do as it is told rather than vaguely reinterpret your actions is a rare commodity in MPV-land.

It makes a difference, and difference is what this Orlando offers. There is a huge choice of seven-seaters out there for a range of budgets, but not every driver will be happy with a soulless box. Thankfully for those of you with a little more personality and a keen eye for a bargain, the Orlando

price cut to carry

VOLKSWAGEN will energise the surpermini sector for the next two months with top offers on its award-wnning Polo, to follow up on a successful 2010.

Until March 31, all versions of the 2010 European Car of the Year – apart from GTI hot hatch and BlueMotion eco warrior models – are available to private buyers with £500 off – starting with the entry-level Polo S 1.2-litre three-door at £9,495.

The latest and fifth generation Polo was launched in October 2009 and has also been voted World Car of the Year 2010.

The car's growing reputation helped the Polo to its best-selling year in the UK since 2003.

Cut-price high-spec new Lancer

Compiled by Steve Loader

MITSUBISHI has launched a new high-value special edition Lancer model, the petrol-engine 1.5 Juro (£14.749).

Based on the current midrange Lancer 1.5 GS2, it gains black leather upholstery and a Kenwood integrated sat nav system, which includes a reversing camera as standard.

It also brings Bluetooth connectivity, i-Pod connection, 16-inch alloys, climate control, leather steering wheel with audio controls, electric windows, powered and heated door mirrors, and metallic paint with colour-keyed rear spoiler.

On the safety front it also comes with front, side, curtain and knee airbags and a Euro NCAP five-star safety rating.

Extending the eco range at Vauxhall

VAUXHALL has announced a 'first' by offering eco models across its entire five-strong van range.

Carrying the brand's Ecoflex label, the line-up now includes two new Luton-built Vivaro Ecoflex panel van 2.0-litre diesels, at 90PS (88bhp) and 115PS (113bhp) both with low CO2 outputs for their sector of just 185g/km, despite having payloads of up to 1,254kg.

The duo complement the recently-launched Corsavan Ecoflex 1.3CDTi Start/Stop which emits a miserly 105g/km CO2

At the other extreme in bulk and offering bestin-class CO2 output of 202g/km, is the 3.3 tonne Movano Ecoflex, while Astravan and Combo Ecoflex models complete the Vauxhall range.

Vauxhall Commercial Vehicles' brand manager Steve Bryant said: "Green credentials are becoming a higher priority for customers looking to reduce the carbon footprint of their vehicles.

Canterbury dealer planning three-pronged brand attack

STEVELOADER

LONG-established Canterbury Mazda has shaken up its partner brand line-up.

The site in Broad Oak Road is to relinquish the Hyundai brand in September – the Motorline group is tipped to take it on – but has already set-up two new marques in its place.

already set-up two new marques in its place.

They are premium all-wheel drive brand Subaru and rugged Isuzu, which deals exclusively in pick-up trucks.

Along with Mazda they will create an all-Japanese brand array for the Canterbury firm, which is a standalone car dealership within the John Parker and Son steel group, owner of the huge site behind the car showrooms.

Complement

Canterbury Mazda dealer principal Kevin Ferrell was delighted with the acquisitions, selling a Subaru even before he had a chance to put up the new signs:

"The two brands complement the models in our long-running Mazda franchise," he told Driving.

"But they are also a good fit in other ways: the demographics for the Canterbury and rural east Kent area are right for the 4x4 dependability of the Subaru line-up, especially the rugged Outback and Forester models – some of the farmers around here will have fond memories of the little pick-up trucks that made the brand popular in the UK in the 80s.

"The CT post code area contains a lot of families who enjoy a rural lifestyle and country pursuits, go to horseshows and so on. The Subaru range still contains the racy 300bhp Impreza WRX, but it looks more discreet these days and is aimed at a more discerning performance driver, but we see our main market as rural buyers.

"The timing is good too with the impressive new diesel engine now available for those who are wedded to that fuel."

He added that Isuzu was also welcome and would be popular with local farmers looking for a workhorse, but he also expected the dealership's association with the ParkerSteel operation to pay dividends:

"Our parent company has a massive reach, not just in Kent; it has a database of 30,000 customers and many will be in the construction sector and looking for a tough 4x4 site vehicle."

Sales for both brands are already under way and work will start soon on a £50,000 refurbishment and signage.

Both new brands share the same Midlandbased distributor, which should be pleased with the Subaru development particularly.

Just six years ago, Subaru's ÜK import base was re-located to a 28-acre purpose-built facility at Neats Court near the Port of Sheerness on Sheppey, after outgrowing its previous site in Gloucestershire.

The move coincided with rapid growth for the brand, which then suffered a setback as consumers starting switching more and more to diesels in the all-wheel drive premium sector.

Compounding the problem was Subaru's decision to remain loyal to the distinctive horizontally-opposed cylinder or Boxer engine layout that gives its cars good handling and perforance and underpins the marque's 'Uncommon' marketing pitch.

So, rather than buying in a diesel – though this would have entailed some re-working of its models – it opted to take time to develop a unique Boxer diesel engine, now driving a resurgence of interest in the brand.

With Canterbury Mazda adding it to its portfolio, Subaru now has a well-placed distributor for the whole of the east of the county — former franchise holder KAP at Folkestone having decided to concentrate on servicing and parts.

Kia Sportage

CHANGE is a constant theme at Kia and in the motor market generally nowadays.

Five years ago, like many people, I might have said there is nothing more frustrating than something that looks like a four-wheel drive motor, but has just two wheels under

It conjures memories of that old fraud, the Matra Rancho of the 70s/80s – it should have been dubbed the Macho – created to capitalise on the buzz from the original Range Rover.

'Funky chunky'

Recently though, carmakers have found success with economical front-wheel drive designs that have what I call the 'funky chunky' 4x4 look.

A convenient label like 'crossover' has helped too, making the Nissan Qashqai and Peugeot 3008 big sellers in particular.

And so we come to the Kia Sportage, launched with a fanfare last year in arresting full spec 4x4 glory, but now available in bigA Kia to buy not its value selling front-wheel drive only versions too.

Not only does it exhibit how the market has changed, but also how Kia's image has been transformed in just a few years.

The Korean brand's previous two generations of Sportage were tough and worthy and offered tremendous value, the Mk II being offered latterly with the seven-year/100,000mile warranty now standard on all Kias.

But its replacement is a Kia you can buy because you simply like it, without even considering that warranty and keen pricing from

It is no coincidence that it is also the first

Kia penned completely by former Audi design guru and TT creator Peter Shreyer.

He joined Kia four years ago, but new cars aren't sketched and then made overnight so Shreyer's influence was diluted until the arrival of the Sportage, which could prove to be as pivotal - at least, for now - in changing Kia's image as was the first TT for Audi.

I refuse to label it a crossover though, because the selling pitch there is how such cars straddle the family hatchback, medium MPV and compact SUV/4x4 sectors; the new Sportage is bigger and more striking and lacks the seating/cabin versatility of top crossovers like the Qashqai and the Skoda Yeti.

The rear seats, for instance, do not fold absolutely flat though the cargo space - with seats upright or flat - is good. It will also seat three across the back with good elbow, leg and headroom.

However, despite a big and tall body the Sportage feels nimble and well-sorted and can be pushed hard with just a bit of wallow on bends.

But if you think you need the big 2.0-litre petrol (161bhp) and diesel (134bhp) engines to wring the best out of it, think again.

I would advance the case of the entry level 133bhp 1.6 direct-injection EcoDynamics petrol model tested here. It is lively but smooth and comes with a crisp six-speed gearbox and an automatic stop/start system for urban use, both enabling it to average well over 40mpg.

You will pay more than £1,500 extra for its 114bhp 1.7 diesel equivalent and need to drive many miles before you claw back that cash through an average fuel consumption only 10mpg better.

And the annual road tax bill for the diesel is iust £15 less.

Even at Sportage 1 spec level as tested here, the car comes laden with features including a USB/iPod connection, and the interior is as sharply styled as the exterior, though the plastics quality lets the side down in places.

I would trade up as far as you can afford, because the Sportage looks stunning with all the kit on; those wheel arches are designed for big 18-inch alloys and why not have the full leather treatment plus 4x4 too (from £21,255)? For this is a Kia to be proud of - buy it for itself, as much as the pricing and warranty.

DESPITE economic gloom and doom, new car registrations managed to rise by nearly two per cent in 2010.

Admittedly, industry sources predict a fall of five per cent for the coming year, but the sound reasons why many people splashed their cash on a new motor last year have not really changed.

The big ticket item in anyone's budget, a new house, is not really an option in such uncertain times, but anyone who has a steady job and cash in the bank might fancy changing their car now.

Savings accounts are earning a pittance, so you might make more through big savings on a new car thanks to good deals from carmakers and forecourts desperate to deal.

There is a new realism about list prices anyway as manufacturers recognise that these fairly tale figures are a big deterrent to genuine private buyers, thereby outweighing their intended benefit to carmakers: to convince fleet buyers of fantastic bulk-buy discounts and also to give dealers room to manoeuvre on deals and part exchanges.

Other buyer incentives out there in a tough market include superb packages on finance – which banks simply won't match incurrence and corriging

- insurance and servicing.

There are also outstanding warranties available such as Vauxhall's 'lifetime' guarantee on cars up to 100,000 miles.

Servicing deals often cost extra but can be very cost-effective, so ask about those if one is not offered.

Remember too that road tax also favours downsizing or changing to a leaner and meaner motor; most superminis and many family hatchbacks now qualify for zero road tax in year one and modest charges thereafter.

Petrol power is also coming back into the frame against diesel, particularly at the lower end of the market. The fuel itself is set to stay cheaper than diesel simply because oil refining capacity is geared more to the former.

Petrol engines are also cheaper to buy upfront and lighter, and while they still cannot compete on economy with diesels, it is the savings elsewhere that quietly add up: less wear and tear on tyres and front end mechanicals.

Diesels may have won over many sceptics with their good low-down power delivery, but small and efficient turbocharged petrol units are making a difference here now and, with the nimbleness of petrol power, make for more entertaining driving.

Petrol engine emissions are also being lowered steadily so their road tax and emissions credentials are far better.

Factor in all of the above and the sums start to add up on ditching something dated and less efficient in favour of a modern and more eco-friendly model.

Buyers find small is beautiful

STEVELOADER

DOWNSIZING continues to be the UK motor market's buzzword.

Some 20 years ago, the family saloon/company car sector was dominant, largely thanks to the company car culture where big and brash was beautiful.

Then came the rise of the family hatchback and supermini; throughout the Nineties and early Noughties they had a ding-dong battle for market leadership.

However, helped by soaring fuel and insurance costs, greater environmental awareness and then by Government legislation via punitive road tax on larger cars, ever more stylish superminis have gained well over 40 per cent of sales if you include the even smaller city car segment – family hatchbacks had to settle for the No2 spot with around 25 per cent of registrations.

Crossover

More difficult to quantify though is the trend towards 'crossovers' – cars like the Nissan Qashqai, Skoda Yeti and Peugeot 3008.

As the name implies they straddle several sectors including family hatchback, MPV (multi-purpose vehicle) or people carrier and SUV (Sports Utility Vehicle) and are hard to pigeonhole under the current classification system.

Many manufacturers have already tried to apply the sexy new crossover label to what would once have been their SUV models – especially as the 4x4/SUV sector has declined – and we can expect an industry

SIZE MATTERS: Family cars no longer dominate the UK sales Top 10, but remaining buyers and company car 'users choosers' now seek premium models like this Saab 9-3 choosers' now seek premium models like this Saab 9-3 reappraisal of how classes are defined and

This could then show a burgeoning third sector comprising the new-age crossover designs.

In the meantime, registration figures from motor industry mouthpiece, the SMMT, show how superminis (S) and family hatchbacks (H) rule the UK top 10:

- 2) Vauxhall Astra(H)

GLOBAL warming and care for the environment has created a need for leaner and meaner models.

New road tax bandings, ranging from zero to £950 a year for gas guzzling limos or 4x4s, are changing our car buying habits too.

Of course, anyone spending £50,000-100,000 on a new motor won't worry about small change like that, but most people like saving a few quid there and through the improved economy of greener cars, while incidentally doing their bit for the environment.

Longer term, electric cars may be the answer and there has been lots of publicity about 'plug-in' models for overnight charging at home or city centre charging points.

But battery technology has some catching up to do and the zero emissions argument is misleading. Until we have zero emission power stations, electric cars simply transfer the CO2 and noxious gas output from exhaust pipe to belching chimney.

Refinement

Are hybrids the answer then? Japanese giants Toyota and Honda lead here, pairing conventional engines with electric power and batteries.

However, hybrids are expensive to buy and the economy at motorway speeds is no better than a frugal diesel.

And so we return to the internal combustion 'lump' where emissions are plummeting, economy is soaring and refinement is improving.

In fact, things are moving so fast that you marvel at what a few legislative kicks up the backside have achieved.

The downsizing phenomenon is well under way too, with several new cars proving that 'small is beautiful'.

Most carmakers also now have an 'eco' sub-

brand such as Vauxhall's Ecoflex, Skoda's Greenline, and Seat's Ecomotive.

But they often don't come cheap, so weigh potential long-term savings against upfront cost - if you don't cover the miles, conventional alternatives may be a better bet.

Don't ignore petrol models either; the higher price of diesel cars and the fuel at the pumps must be compared with new small capacity low emission/consumption petrol engines such as the turbocharged 1.4-litre units found in the Skoda and Seat ranges

Fuel consumption figures for Saab 9-3 Diesel Saloon Range in mpg (litres/100km): Urban 36.7-49.6 (7.7-5.7), Extra-urban 60.1-72.4 (4.7-3.9), Combined 48.7-62.8 (5.8-4.5).

The Saab 1.9TTiD Saloon from just £289 a month" (excl. VAT).

The Saab 9-3 Twin Turbo Diesel Saloon range now has a choice of three 1.9TTID engines with CO: emissions of just 119g/km". So you can drive away without paying road tax!. But economy doesn't come at the expense of performance, in fact the exhibitrating 180PS variant is the most powerful car in its class. With prices from just £289 a month" (excl. VAT) and generous specification that includes leather trim seats, 17" alloy wheels, Bluetooth and heated front seats all as standard, the most efficient thing to do would be to test drive one today.

Will a diesel save you money in the long run?

SALES of new diesel cars in the UK rose to a record of 46.1 per cent last year, but research by car buying watchdog Parkers, show they may not be the smart choice.

The website's editor Kieren Puffett said: "Although the average economy is usually rated better than the equivalent petrol model, a diesel model will carry a premium over petrol when you come to buy and diesel is still more expensive at the pumps. In some cases that means you'll have to travel many miles before it starts to pay off."

Parkers underlined the point by picking 10 models with both diesel and petrol equivalents in their range and calculated how many miles a buyer would need to cover at current fuel prices to recoup their money, if travelling an average of 12,000 miles a year.

Puffett said: "The results turned out to be

Puffett said: "The results turned out to be quite surprising. For instance, a diesel Chevrolet Captiva, costing £5,000 more than its petrol equivalent, will take 15 years to recoup your money in fuel savings – patently a ridiculous idea. Conversely, a Saab 9-5 diesel is both cheaper to run and buy so you'd be a fool to opt for a 9-5 petrol."

DOs and DON'Ts before buying a new car

- Don't accept the first deal on offer be ready to haggle.
- 2 Don't be afraid to ask for trimmings like a tank of fuel, car mats or further discounts or extras.
- Onn't fall for what seems like a big bargain before you even haggle. It could be an unpopular engine or trim combination or a car on 'run-out' where production ceased a while ago it might be just as thirsty as your old car and will depreciate badly.
- Do pick a model that saves fuel, insurance, road tax and depreciation it won't get any easier out there.
- Don't be blinded by road tax-exempt diesel eco models check price, running costs and green credentials and the savings over your planned ownership mileage/years and then compare against the closest standard version.
- Do not assume that diesel will save you money you will usually pay far more up front and the engines are generally heavier, which means more wear and tear on front tyres and mechanicals. The fuel is also dearer at the pumps, while petrol cars have become dramatically better on fuel and emissions and, in most cases, are far nicer to drive.
- Do spare a thought for an LPG (liquefied petroleum gas) car model. LPG offers lower emissions and is roughly half the price of petrol at the pumps. There are also many more filling stations offering the fuel, so there is now no need to rely on the car's more expensive petrol tank bridging the gap between gas fill-ups.

MAKE SURE THE PRICE IS RIGHT: Malaysia's Proton offers a dual-fuel petrol and LPG version of its popular GEN-2 family hatchback and saloon models

Braced for shockwave of R&D base's closure

THE impending closure of Pfizer's Sandwich base is expected to have a devastating knock-on effect on the Kent economy.

In addition to the 2,400 direct employees who will be made redundant over the next two years, an estimated 3,000 extra jobs may also be lost once contractors and other small businesses lose their main source of revenue.

Andrew Aves – regional organiser of the Kent branch of the Federation of Small Businesses – described the situation as "very serious".

He added: "Clearly the supply chain is going to be affected too, such as the people who work in the staff canteen, for example. I wouldn't have thought the staff at Pfizer clean their own win-

"But the knock-on effect will be significant right across the board, because if you remove the wage packets of 2,400 people then the grocery stores, pubs, restaurants, theatres and so on are all going to suffer. People commute to Sandwich from Canterbury, Thanet and elsewhere, so the closure of Pfizer presents a huge risk to the economic sustainability of east Kent, which is vulnerable enough as it is."

Pfizer - which lays claim to some of the world's biggest medical discoveries, including antiimpotence drug Viagra - is based in Surrey and has other operations in Maidenhead, Aberdeen and Cambridge development on allergy and respiratory drugs. At its peak, about 5,000 staff worked there, but numbers halved after manufacturing ended at the site in 2007.

The Sandwich site conducts research and

Jo James, chief executive of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, said the closure was a "huge blow" to the county.

She added: "An operation of the scale of Pfizer draws heavily on the local supply chain in terms of goods, services and infrastructure. The knock-on effect of the closure will undoubtedly be heavy in east Kent, and probably throughout the county.

"Pfizer is also representative of a very special hi-tech science sector of which Kent has been justifiably proud. Its withdrawal from the area, which has provided such a valuable infrastructure for years, is extremely disappointing."

Ms James added that she felt Sandwich and east Kent as a whole should have the ability and talent to overcome the loss of Pfizer.

She said: "We can but hope that with government help the facilities, the workforce and the local supply chain can move onto other things to mitigate the effects."

ourism growth's solid foundations

A STRIKING campaign aimed at marketing the county as cool and contemporary has drawn in an additional £18 million for the tourism industry.

In its first five months the £400,000 Kent Contemporary project, designed by Visit Kent and M&C Saatchi, pulled in almost 420,000 extra visitors. The campaign featured posters - displayed at London stations and on the Underground – of unusual images of Kent captured by leading photographer Jean Luc

The aim was to tempt city dwellers and people from across the South East and Europe to the county to enjoy its natural and historic delights.

The chief executive of Visit Kent, Sandra Matthews-Marsh, said the campaign was already proving its worth. "I am looking forward to working with more tourism, leisure and hospitality businesses and organisations committed to growing our economy," she added.

The campaign – which featured three key images: Hever Castle; Botany Bay in Thanet; and the Goods Shed in Canterbury - also encouraged county residents to take more overnight trips and day trips in Kent, with a total value of just under £11 million - although this figure was not included in the economic impact data.

Cllr Kevin Lynes, Kent County Council's cabinet member for regeneration and economic development, said: "These are stunning results and it's great to see so many people visiting our county. This campaign opened the eyes of many potential visitors by showing them the hidden gems we all take for granted.
"We have more than 3,000 tourism, leisure and hospitality businesses in Kent and their success is crucial. KCC is committed to working with Visit Kent and investors to promote this industry, which contributes more than £2.5 billion to our economy every year and supports 50,000 jobs.

"So many people are benefiting from the success of the Kent Contemporary campaign."

Comment

HIS week's decision by Pfizer to close its base in Sandwich serves as a harsh reminder of the world we currently live in.

While the Government prefers to use words like "recovery" and "revival" when referring to the economy these days, it's clear business is still struggling and that even the biggest multinational corporations are being forced to cut their losses.

The 2,400 employees directly affected by the impending closure of Pfizer have some big decisions to make over the next two years, as it is clear such highly-specialised jobs will be hard to come by anywhere else in the county.

Many will be forced to leave Kent in search of alternative employment, while some may decide they have no choice but to seek a new career path altogether.

There is also the knock-on effect the closure is bound to have on the local economy. As both the Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses have pointed out, there are likely to be many more firms that will suffer from the loss of such a huge employer.

What will happen to all the shop workers, restaurant staff, cleaners, canteen workers and so on who rely on the cash spent by Pfizer's army of workers? Unfortunately it looks like many will end up beside them in the dole queue.

However, through the dark storm clouds gathering over Sandwich, there are some who can just make out a glimmer of hope in the distance.

They say the site is just too large and too hi-tech to be wasted, and that the demise of Pfizer in Kent could lead to an influx of science-led companies that could make full use of the technology available to them.

Kent County Council is well aware of how important the Sandwich base is to the east Kent economy and beyond, and should be pushing the Government to do all it can to ensure such a positive outcome.

First LEP meeting sets the agenda for economic growth

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

THE first meeting of a new economic powerhouse has taken place, kick-starting the new generation of Local Enterprise Partnerships.

Leaders from the public and private sectors in Kent, Greater Essex and East Sussex met in Dartford last week to discuss the work ahead of them and the priorities of the new organisation.

The LEP, which is seen as one of the successors of the South East England Development Agency (Seeda), will work with businesses in the region to drive economic growth and regeneration.

economic growth and regeneration.
Funds will come from bids to central government, unlike with predecessor Seeda, which received tens of millions of pounds every year.

Kent County Council leader Cllr Paul Carter said the first meeting went well but stressed the board was still temporary and members may change.

"We decided 45 people around the table was too many to carry out the day-to-day business so we will have an executive board that will report back to the LEP partners," he said.

"We'll also do an executive search to get the right person for the job of chairman." Cllr Carter said priorities set out in the original LEP bid had remained consistent.

"We're trying to support significant regeneration and change in deprived coastal reaches. We're also looking to work on how to deliver more in the Thames Gateway and ensure support for rural economies.

"Other priorities are the need for greater housing growth and transport networks. We're trying to be more proactive in coming up with solutions like in our Growth Without Gridlock document, which looks at development such as building a third Thames crossing.

"The LEP will come up with all sorts of innovative solutions through public and private sector working."

Deprived

Cllr Carter said the LEP area had significant needs and the profile had to be raised.

"We have deprived coastal areas that need help. Money goes into the North and North East of England where there is poverty – we need that too." he said.

too," he said.
"The different areas [Kent, Greater Essex and East Sussex] coming together on common issues will mean greater impact on Government and more influence. Ultimately, we all endeavour to make a difference."

Representatives from Kent and Medway's Federation of Small Businesses (FSB) attended the meeting and gave a cautious welcome to the progress being made.

The organisation, which represents 6,700 businesses in Kent, said it was pleased the original work programme set out by the LEP – launched at the House of Lords in October – had remained the same.

Kent and Medway FSB chairman Roger House said: "The interim board has agreed its priorities for the LEP and will now be looking to work with partners including other business organisations, universities, colleges and local authorities to deliver those objectives.

"The FSB is willing to play its part to ensure those projects are delivered in a cost-effective way that will bring real benefits for businesses, residents and the economies across the LEP area.

the economies across the LEP area. "We have already seen this Government exclude the LEP from schemes which would benefit our local economies, such as the National Insurance contribution holiday', which means local start-ups are paying up to an extra £10,000 to employ staff compared with firms elsewhere in the UK.

pared with firms elsewhere in the UK.
"And also the Enterprise Allowance Scheme which gives grants to longterm unemployed people wishing to start their own businesses.

"We believe it is important that within its work the LEP gets the message across that excluding local entrepreneurs from such schemes is a false economy and damages UK plc."

Making timely case for extra winter light

A KENT businessman has asked his MP to support daylight saving time and queried whether we should be putting our clocks back in the autumn.

Aaron Dewhurst, managing director of the Glass Wipe Board Company, based in Hythe, spoke to his MP, Damian Collins, on local business matters.

One area of conversation was the day-light saving debate and how it could affect Kent businesses.

Daylight saving time was introduced in the early 20th century and since then Britons have been putting the clocks one hour ahead in spring and winding them back one hour during autumn.

Over the years the public and politicians have debated whether we should be moving the clocks back at all. Mr Collins, the MP for Folkestone and Hythe, supports daylight saving and believes businesses could benefit from having more daylight in winter afternoons.

He said: "Businesses in retail and leisure could open later and have more daylight trading time. Commuters would have the opportunity to travel home in the light.

Activity

"It would also reduce energy costs and increase business activity, therefore daylight saving would benefit not only local businesses but countrywide businesses too. The Daylight Saving Bill 2010-11, a private members' bill, has been intro-duced to Parliament. If passed, the Government will conduct further analysis, tests and reports. Prime Minister David Cameron would want the country on the whole to support the bill.

Mr Dewhurst believes an extra hour of daylight in the afternoon will have a huge benefit.

He said: "Not only will it allow an extra hour of trading for Kent businesses, but it is argued that road traffic injuries would reduce as children and some commuters would be travelling home in the daylight.

"Energy costs may be reduced as people are more likely to go outside rather than stay indoors where artificial light-ing is used. An extra hour in the afternoon may also give tourism a boost because the extra afternoon light would lengthen the tourist season.

"Tourism-related businesses such as retail, hospitality and transport would benefit from the extra hour of trade along with the prospect of more tourists.'

County's 'big conversation' turns to future food security

THE security of Kent's food production, horticulture and agriculture was the main topic of discussion at a business event.

Kent County Council and the Kent Economic Board organised the debate in conjunction with East Malling Research and other major players in the production sector.

The event, viewed as a 'big conversation' with land-based businesses and their advisers, is part of KCC's and KEB's efforts to get closer to key industries to ensure Kent's future prosperity. The conference was chaired by Jon Regan of Hugh Lowe Farms,

KEB's business champion for the sector, at the East Malling Research conference centre.

KCC leader Cllr Paul
Carter told the conference: "Businesses in the food chain in Kent employ more than 85,000 people and the sector is worth an estimated £2.6bn per annum to the county's economy.

"It is vital that we listen to their needs in order to ensure they can contribute to the future wellbeing of Kent and emerging priorities of the Local Enterprise Partnership.
"Feedback from this event will contribute to future business development in the county and give us a clearer understanding of what this diverse industry needs to succeed.

"We will then be better placed to look at planning policy, pro-viding the right skills for the workforce and speaking on behalf of the industry in the corridors of Westminster."

An audience representing more than 100 businesses attended the discussion, which brought together the National

Ardo, one of Europe's largest food companies, has taken on Ploegmakers Food Ingredients which supplies fresh-frozen and refrigerated fruit, vegetables and herbs for different food products, including ready meals and sauces.

The Dutch company has an annual turnover of about £30 million. Through the acquisition, a new company called Ardo Food Ingredients has been established.

Cutting back on VATnot your profits

appealing.
Those with an annual, VAT-exclusive turnover below £150,000 per year may make big savings in their VAT payments by operating the 'flat-rate scheme'.

Once approved to use the scheme by HMRC, a business can account for VAT on its turnover at a lower rate of VAT, while still charging customers the full 20 per cent.

Different rates apply to different types of business. For example, hairdressers or beauticians account for VAT at a rate of 13 per cent; a management consultant 14 per cent; an architect or surveyor 14.5 per cent; a general builder (providing goods as well as services) 9.5 per cent; and pubs 6.5 per cent. In return, the business does not

In return, the business does not make a separate claim for VAT on its purchases, except for capital items over £2,000 (eg, a commercial vehicle or plant and machinery) or stock and assets on hand at the date of registration, for which VAT can be recovered as normal.

If using the scheme within the first year of VAT registration the published rate can be reduced by one per cent for that first year following registration.

Once on the scheme, a business

THE BG INTERVEW

Fans used to a diet of high-octane Premiership football featuring millionaire players found themselves on short rations during the England team's performance in the World Cup finals last year. During post-tournament recriminations, a recurring theme was the lack of good homegrown talent nurtured by top English clubs, happy to import crowd pleasers from abroad. But is this set to change? Not at club level so much, but at the grass roots? STEVE LOADER went to watch and then became engrossed in a soccer training session at Maidstone

TONY BROWNE

T WAS a cold January night and I wasn't expecting much as I turned up for the end of SoccerElite training in Maidstone. The plan was to witness a session before interviewing one of the organisation's co-directors and former professional player, Tony Browne.

Will it have changed that much since my day, though? A time when grumpy and grizzled old coaches would shout grudging praise and seemingly gleeful abuse in equal amounts.

The answer is yes, if SoccerElite is anything to go by. I quickly found myself drawn into watching the obvious enthusiasm shown by youngsters, first practising skills and then playing a quickfire game, with Tony skilfully maintaining the tempo via chirpy tips and lobbing in a replacement ball quickly when the previous one had gone into touch.

Y the end, the players – some as young as seven, but all shapes and heights – left the floodlit practice field at Maplesden Noakes School, chattering loudly. After this workout, Tony, 34, stressed how important it was that, even when a lad missed a shot or was caught in possession, that his advice should carry a positive message. Not surprisingly, I find he has added a degree in sport science and psychology to his professional playing experience and FA coaching qualifications.

He and co-director Lee Spiller, 32 – another experienced professional and a former team-mate – started SoccerElite four years ago after perceiving a gap between local training efforts via schools and small clubs, and the professional clubs – the need for a kind of football academy.

Not only has the business taken off, but unearthed a string of potential future stars after numerous trials with major clubs and signings with the likes of Tottenham, Arsenal and Chelsea and with Kent's biggest club, Gillingham.

SoccerElite sides now regularly play academy sides from the top clubs – many of these lead to a young player being spotted and invited for a trial or to sign.

More importantly perhaps, SoccerElite players are also exposed to foreign counterparts early through international tournaments. Last year some 60 players, aged seven to 12, accompanied by about 100 parents, took part in a series in Italy. This year they will contest a tournament in Valencia, Spain.

"They meet different types of players and skills, but it's not just about football; it's just an unforgettable experience that will take them to even greater heights," said Tony, with typical enthusiasm, adding: "While we are developing youngsters' individual skills, we are also teaching them to play in a team. It's not about results, it's about that awareness of working together and every player wanting to get on the ball as part of the team effort."

occerElite is now in the process of restructuring in order to expand outside of Kent, aiming to double in size each year over the next two years (see comment below by Phil Beavan of Innovation & Growth).

Tony himself was spotted early by West Ham United, which maintained a position in the top flight then largely through spotting and bringing on young talent, both to supply its team and to sell on.

His own experience convinced him of the need for organised training early on: "People just don't see it, but Lee and I know what made us better players, and that's what allows you to make that extra step up. Then you are playing with better players and that raises your game, increases your options and so on."

SoccerElite runs a team of experienced coaches and charges £7 a week per player, currently training around 400 youngsters – boys and girls – in and around the Maidstone area, including a special goalkeepers' master class.

"We pay a premium rate to use the best facilities available, "said Tony. "It doesn't compare well with what I've seen in America mind you, where I visited one college that had a 20,000-seat stadium and filled it virtually every game, but the game has a different structure out there.

"And facilities are getting better here, despite the fact that just putting in flood-lights for an evening practice facility starts at around half a million. Ultimately though, we want our own training facility."

Tony – a versatile midfielder and defender – hung up his boots two years ago: "The business was really taking off and taking my time. I work five nights a week and Saturdays at Chelsea's Academy – and, on the field... well, I wasn't getting any quicker.

"Of course I miss it, but this is great, too, working with young talent. I was also lucky enough to play with great players like Frank Lampard and Rio Ferdinand and it would be nice to think we are nurturing talents like that – there are not enough flair players coming through the English system.

"But SoccerElite is not just about the obvious talent. It's also about those kids who have something that will take longer to come out. Everyone's different and there are many kids whose footballing brain takes time to develop, or they are not physically ready.

"They are the types who get overlooked by the system, but we can carry on working with them so that they get a chance later or simply get more out of their game."

DREAM TEAM: Enthusiasm for the game is clear at SoccerElite

PHIL BEAVAN – portfolio director of the Government-funded South East Business Innovation & Growth advisory service:

"What we have worked on with SoccerElite is changing a successful football coaching academy into a well-structured business that happens to coach football, in order to generate the higher levels of growth that the business deserves.

"SoccerElite is a very strong brand that has huge potential and what this restructuring will do is lighten the administrative burden on the management team and their backroom staff.

"At the moment the company is Kent's best known business secret and what we have looked at is putting the pieces in place to double size and turnover over the next 12 months, and go again the year after and through expansion outside of Kent. The company will remain Kent-based and become a major export for the county."

TONY'S TOP TIPS

- Catch 'em young "We say it's obvious for football, but it applies to any skill or talent. Nurture it early and you will get the best from it."
- Give positive advice "Stick and carrot was the traditional way, but youngsters can take it hard. I'm often shocked like many people by the stuff parents shout at kids from the touchline. We always try to be upbeat it works. And it applies in all walks of life, not just football."
- Take advice yourself: "We have built a good business without any outside funding. We've used our savings and then some, and worked really hard, but we wonder whether we could have achieved more with outside help and advice. Now we have backers and sound professional advisers, we can go to the next level with confidence."

Parkway station 'key to avoiding gridlock'

By MARIJKE COX

marijke.cox@kosmedia.co.uk

THE wheels have been set in motion for the development of crucial transport links with the launch of a multi-million-pound funding bid.

If successful, Kent could see a share of up to £10 million of Government's £1.4 billion Regional Growth Fund which would go towards the planned Thanet Parkway station

The proposed development is one of a list of priorities, including a third Thames crossing and solution to Operation Stack, outlined by Kent County Council as part of a landmark strategy called Growth Without Gridlock.

Transport chiefs said the station, which would be on the Ashford to Ramsgate line, would not only help create thousands of jobs in east Kent, but improve the much-criticised rail network and boost business at Kent International Airport in Manston.

Kent County Council's former cabinet member for environment, highways and waste Cllr Nick Chard said it would have an enormous impact on Thanet and the surrounding area.

RIGHT TRACK: A Manston parkway station on the Ashford line could unlock investment

"We are working closely with Network Rail and we are trying to fund it by bidding for money from the Regional Growth Fund," he said. For me, it's a question of when we do this,

The proposed development would improve journey times between Ashford and Ramsgate, where high-speed trains from east Kent are unable to reach full speed until nearer London.

North Thanet MP Roger Gale has been campaigning for better rail services for the area. He said: "Upgrading the line between Ashford and Ramsgate and the creation of the Thanet Parkway station would also unlock investment."

Charles Buchanan, the chief executive of Manston, said anything that improved links and connectivity in east Kent could only be a good thing.

"The parkway station would have a positive impact on the area – we identified this in our own master plan for growth," he said. "East Kent will become a weekend destination for tourists, and residents and businesses can be served by an airport on their doorstep.

The £10m bid was put together by Kent County Council, Thanet District Council, Network Rail, Southeastern and Kent International Airport owner Infratil.

The Government said successful bids will be announced within 50 days.

KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter said a Thanet Parkway station would support economic growth with an estimated 1,000 jobs created per million new air passengers.

He added that improvement to transport networks in east Kent could help create 6,000 jobs by 2033.

"To deliver true growth and prosperity we need radical plans and innovative new ways to fund them," Cllr Carter said.

Having your say on future of industry

MANUFACTURERS are being urged to respond to a government growth review to have their say on the future of the industry.

The Advanced Manufacturing Growth Review document outlines the aims of the manufacturing sector, sets out the key competitive strengths and examines the major long-term growth opportunities.

The Manufacturing Advisory Service South East is asking Kent firms to respond before the February 11 deadline.

Programme manager David Caddle said the document sets out the action Government is taking within the sector. "What we want to do as an organisation is to make sure manufacturers in our region know about this framework and are given every opportunity to comment on the plans," he said.

"There will never be a better opportunity for firms, working at the coalface, to have their views fed into the decision making process so they actually influence policy that will evolve over the next decade.

Strengths

The Advanced Manufacturing Growth Review will reflect the capabilities of UK manufacturing, the strengths of the economy and the opportunities for broad-based growth from globalisation, technological development and the move to a low-carbon economy.

It will also aim to tackle barriers such as skills shortages, rising energy costs, security of supply, export and regulatory issues. Mr Caddle said: "Manufacturers need to read the document and ask, are these ambitions the right ones? Are there more pressing issues? What Government action would you like to see?

"We have already had a £50 million commitment to enhance the Manufacturing Advisory Service and a further £600,000 is being invested in a two-year automation and robotics programme that will deliver greater productivity and increase precision performance. It is pleasing to see advanced manufacturing is so high on the list of priorities and companies need to do their bit to ensure their voice is heard."

In response to feedback from customers, the bank has packaged a number of lending initiatives designed to help them maintain a healthy cash position and identify growth areas. These include already established Government-backed lending schemes - the Enterprise Finance Guarantee scheme and European Investment Bank loan - as well as specific initiatives launched by the bank including a £1 billion Manufacturing Fund, SME Exporters Package, SME Customer Charter and the Business Hotline, as well as traditional banking facilities and lines of

Indeed, with increased access to the wide range of funding schemes now available it is fair to say there are more finance options available to SMEs than ever before, so it is increasingly important for business owners to explore all options and ensure the solution fits their business, rather than the other way round.

Lending is not the only proposition that supports your business, though. It is vital that you review your finances and ensure any excess funds are not laying dormant in current accounts but are positioned in deposit facilities tailored to suit your needs.

UR deposits team has a wealth experience and knowledge to help support customers to find the best solution to meet their deposit needs to ensure your funds work as hard as you do and in line with your business aspirations

For companies looking to diversify their risk, developing export markets is an ideal way of doing this while at the same time tapping into new areas of growth opportunities. It can seem a complex activity with a lengthy order to cash cycle, but we're here to help simplify the process and offer all the support we can.

In addition to having a strong product that appeals to overseas markets, you need to be able to assess your prospective customer's credit standing as well as cross-border collection risks. You also need to have a strong understanding of the specific risks you face in exporting.

That is why at NatWest we have developed a dedicated suite of materials and services that provides exporters with all the information they need to be successful.

The launch of the free Exporters Package last year covers the main risks exporters face, and the solutions available to help them manage these; together with details of a range of funding products for preshipment and post-shipment financing, and online tools that improve visibility and control over the financial aspects of export transactions.

HROUGH our comprehensive trade finance offering we can help customers to manage a range of risks, from fulfilling major export orders without having upfront payments to customer insol-

We have a presence in more than 35 countries, including the major trading economies worldwide, as well as an extensive partner bank network.

RBS also recently increased its credit risk appetite by extending its invoice finance offer to over 50 approved countries and trade finance to over 80 countries, including many of the UK's top export destinations.

These are just some of the ways in which we are working closely with our customers to provide that extra support needed in the current economic environment and demonstrate our continued commitment to helping SMEs.

Help us build an extension to Kentish Flats Offshore Wind Farm

Vattenfall, a leading European energy company, would like to extend its Kentish Flats Offshore Wind Farm (also known by local people as Whitstable or Herne Bay Wind Farm) with up to 17 wind turbines. This Statement of Community Consultation explains how you can comment on its proposed application for a development consent order to the Infrastructure Planning Commission.

Kentish Flats Extension - the proposal

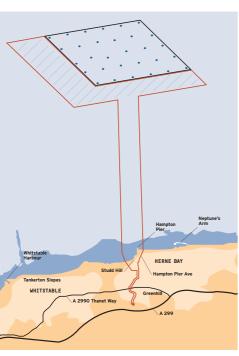

The existing Kentish Flats wind farm with 30 wind turbines has been producing green electricity since 2005. The proposed extension is around 8km off Herne Bay and will be to the south and west of the current project. It could add up to 17 wind turbines in 7.7 km2 of sea, in water depths between three and five metres at lowest tide.

The wind turbines for the extension will have a similar capacity to those currently used, with a tip height up to 145 metres. The turbines will be placed on top of large steel tube foundations which will be driven up to 35 metres into the seabed, similar to the current scheme.

Underwater cables will connect turbines to the existing offshore substation from which one or two underwater cables will run to shore at Hampton Pier, Herne Bay. Onshore, the new cables will follow the route of the existing cabling along the Hampton Pier Road under paved roads to the Red House Farm substation south of Herne Bay. KFE will not require any changes to the power grid.

Due to its scale, Vattenfall must do an assessment, known as EIA, of possible significant environmental effects of the extension. We are also seeking views from all interests, including the public, on the proposal. We will consult on the whole project and have identified the following as likely to be important:

- Potential cumulative impacts on Red-throated divers in the Thames Estuary
- · Visual, landscape and seascape effects
- Impact on fishing, leisure and business interests, including tourism
- Impact of onshore construction on nearby households
- Impact on traffic on roads caused by onshore works

There will be an opportunity to consider these and other points, during the consultation process. We will make available the preliminary findings of our EIA. This initial environmental information will also describe any alternatives we are considering and measures to minimise impacts.

Why Vattenfall wants to extend Kentish Flats

Kentish Flats Extension (KFE) could generate up to 150,000 megawatt hours per year of clean electricity, if 17 turbines are deployed. This is equivalent to the total annual electricity needs of up to 35,000 UK homes.

The UK's delivery of its offshore wind potential could supply the equivalent of 30% of the country's electricity demand. Offshore wind in the UK will help European green energy targets and the reduction of emissions that cause climate change.

Vattenfall is committed to major reductions in carbon emissions from its activities as an energy company. Wind power will it meet that commitment

About Vattenfall

Vattenfall is a leading European energy company and is Europe's fifth largest generator of electricity and the continent's largest producer of heat. Across the north of Europe we operate many wind farms on land and in the sea. This includes Kentish Flats and Thanet Offshore Wind Farm, which is the world's largest offshore wind farm.

Statement of Community Consultation and the Infrastructure Planning Commission

In 2008 new planning laws changed the way projects like KFE are dealt with. Under this new regime the Infrastructure Planning Commission (IPC) controls the planning process for nationally significant infrastructure projects. Vattenfall will submit its proposal to the IPC following a consultation with both the community and organisations including the local authorities, Marine Management Organisation and Natural England.

We will carefully consider all responses received and when the application is made we will report to the IPC and all responders detailing how we have taken the communities' views into account.

The IPC will ask Kent County Council and Canterbury City Council for their opinion of the Vattenfall community consultation. The Councils' opinion will play an important part in whether the IPC accepts the application.

Other planning matters

When the IPC decides on KFE it will take into account any energy related National Policy Statements (NPSs) published by the UK Government. These are currently in draft but will be finalised before a decision is made. These include: Energy (EN-1); Renewable Energy Infrastructure (EN-3); and, Electricity Network Infrastructure (EN-5).

Vattenfall is unaware of any other applications to the IPC or local authorities or consultations which are relevant to this proposal.

You can view a document which describes our approach to the consultation on the Vattenfall website.

If you need help to understand this proposal and the IPC process you can contact Planning Aid by calling 0870 850 9806 or visiting www.rtpi.org.uk/planningaid/planning_aid_in_your_area/south_east/

Help us build the best possible wind farm - get in touch

Vattenfall has already started its consultation but the formal community consultation runs from 31 January 2011 to 4 March 2011. Kentish Flats is already an important feature in the area and we value our good relations with local people.

Please look at our proposals, the preliminary environmental information, maps and other documents. All of these will be available on our website for the duration of the application and, during the consultation period at the locations noted below.

Your views will be taken into account as we complete the assessments of the KFE, finalise the design of the wind farm, and before we submit an application to the IPC.

We will also do the following to help the Thames Estuary coastal community, especially around Herne Bay and Whitstable, and other interests, express their views on our plans:

- Contact by letter homes and businesses likely to be affected by our plans
- Hold public information and consultation days in Herne Bay and Whitstable with specialist staff on hand
- Advertise our plans in local papers
- Advertise the Statement of Community Consultation in local papers in the Thames Estuary region
- Hold separate workshops and meetings with fishermen, other users of the sea and the region's businesses
- Continue meetings with the Area Member Panels and Parish Councils of Whitstable and Herne Bay
- Maintain contact with all those who have shown an interest in the project
- Continue working with local media to publicise Vattenfall's plans Place all relevant documents on the Vattenfall website, including
- Work with Kent County Council and Canterbury City Council to inform local interests of our proposals explaining how they can get involved
- Work with both Councils to identify and engage with hard-to-reach groups
- Place the PEI, maps, other relevant documents and envelopes and questionnaires in the Harbour Office, Whitstable Harbour, the Canterbury City Council office in Herne Bay, Medway Council (Gun Wharf, Dock Road, Chatham), Swale Borough Council (Swale House, East Street, Sittingbourne), Thanet District Council (Cecil Street, Margate), Maldon District Council (Princes Road, Maldon), Rochford District Council, (3-19 South Street, Rochford) Southend-on-Sea Borough Council (12th FI, Civic Centre, Victoria Avenue, Southendon-Sea), Castle Point Borough Council (Kiln Road, Benfleet)
